Description	The instructor divides participants into two smaller groups. Each group receives a paper with a symbol that they creatively embody with their bodies. Once the instructor approves the symbol, they hide it for the other group to find. Subsequently, each group receives papers with different letters. Now, each group divides into three stations. The first station, holding the letters, walks each letter on the ground for the second group to decipher and recreate with their bodies. In the meantime, one member from the third group observes, while the other faces away. The observer from the third group tries to write the letter on someone in the same group's back, who then writes it on a piece of paper. Repeat this process for each letter until all are completed. Finally, everyone comes together to decipher the word formed by these letters.
